EXCLUDE CERTAIN EXPERT TESTIMONY OF JERRY A. HAUSMAN

Case No. 07-5944 SC

MDL No. 1917

1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Sharp had its case transferred to this MDL by representing that its complaint contained 3 the same allegations of price-fixing as the other MDL actions. Now, Sharp claims Defendants 4 should have known all along that it was also seeking an entirely different claim against them
5 based upon an agreement to exchange information. In all three iterations of its complaint, 6 however, Sharp did not provide notice of that distinct rule-of-reason information-exchange
7 claim under the Sherman Act. Sharp's attempt to introduce its new claim through cryptic 8 discovery responses and expert opinion is both procedurally improper and insufficient to 9 provide notice of the new claim. Defendants would be severely prejudiced if this new claim 10 was allowed at this late stage because it would alter the nature of the litigation and require 11 reopening discovery and summary judgment briefing on the new claim. Sharp should not be 12 allowed to present evidence at trial on the separate, unpleaded claim of an agreement to 13 exchange information.

14 Sharp has not met its burden in establishing that Dr. Hausman's rule-of-reason 15 analysis is relevant to its per se price-fixing claim. Sharp's conclusory statement that the 16 same methodology would apply under either claim is not proof of relevance. Nowhere in Dr.
17 Hausman's report or testimony has he represented that the same methodology he applied to 18 the alleged information-exchange violation would also apply if there was a per se global 19 price-fixing conspiracy as Sharp pleaded in its complaints. Accordingly, the Court should 20 preclude Dr. Hausman's testimony related to Sharp's unpleaded rule-of-reason claim based 21 upon the anticompetitive effects of Defendants' alleged information exchanges and his 22 estimate of Sharp's damages based upon those information exchanges.

23 II. ARGUMENT

24 A. Sharp Never Alleged A Claim For A Sherman Act Violation 25 Based Upon An Agreement To Exchange Information In Any 26 Of Its Complaints

27 Sharp does not dispute that its first claim for relief in the SAC (or any of its earlier 28 complaints) only alleges a horizontal price-fixing conspiracy among Defendants. See Def.
MIL No. 9 at 8-9. Instead, Sharp points to language in the introduction of its three complaints

EXCLUDE CERTAIN EXPERT TESTIMONY OF JERRY A. HAUSMAN

1 to suggest that Defendants had notice that Sharp was asserting two distinct and alternative 2 violations of the Sherman Act. Opp. at 1 (Dkt. 3701). Specifically, in the first paragraph of 3 Sharp’s SAC and prior complaints, Sharp asserts that it “brings this action to recover damages 4 on account of the antitrust injuries it incurred as a result of a long-running conspiracy by 5 suppliers of cathode ray tubes (‘CRTs’) to coordinate and fix the prices of CRTs and 6 exchange detailed competitive information.” SAC ¶ 1. To begin with, this introductory 7 statement fails to satisfy Rule 10(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, which provides 8 that “each claim should . . . be set forth in a separate count (i.e., a different section) of the 9 complaint, with factual allegations pertaining to each particular claim set forth in the section 10 of the complaint dealing with the particular claim.” Scheller v. Interstate Realty Mgmt., No.
 11 14-cv-0457, 2014 WL 907363, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 7, 2014) (citing Rule 10(b)). Moreover, 12 a fair reading of this introductory statement in the context of the complaint as a whole 13 suggests that Sharp alleges that the information exchanges were held in furtherance of the 14 price-fixing conspiracy, an allegation Sharp explicitly makes elsewhere in its SAC. See, e.g., 15 SAC ¶ 253(f) (“exchanging competitive sensitive information in order to facilitate their 16 conspiracy”). In fact, Sharp sets forth the basis for its action in the very next paragraph: 17 “Defendants and their co-conspirators formed an international cartel that conducted a long-18 running conspiracy extending at a minimum from at least March 1, 1995, through at least 19 December 2007 (the ‘Relevant Period’). The purpose and effect of this conspiracy was to fix, 20 raise, stabilize and maintain prices for CRTs.” SAC ¶ 2. There is no indication in this 21 paragraph, or any subsequent paragraph, that Sharp intended to allege two separate 22 conspiracies accomplished through different anticompetitive conduct.

23 Sharp’s attempt to distinguish its complaints from other MDL plaintiffs’ complaints is 24 unavailing. Sharp argues that Defendants should have been on notice of its distinct claim for 25 an information-exchange violation because it alleges that “[w]ith respect to CRTs, Defendants 26 or their agents agreed, inter alia, to . . . exchange pertinent information on, inter alia, 27 shipments, prices, production, and customer demand” Opp. at 2 (citing Sharp 28 Compl. ¶ 6, No. 13-cv-1173, Dkt. 1 (“Sharp Compl.”)); see also SAC ¶ 6. Yet, this identical language appears in numerous other MDL plaintiffs' complaints that do not assert a separate claim for an agreement to exchange information. See, e.g., Compl. for Damages and Injunctive Relief ¶ 4, Target Corp. v. Chunghwa Picture Tubes, Ltd., No. 11-cv-5514 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 14, 2011), Dkt. 1 ("Target Compl.") ("With respect to CRTs, Defendants or their agents agreed, inter alia, to . . . exchange pertinent information on, inter alia, shipments, prices, production, and customer demand . . ."); Compl. ¶ 6, Dell Inc. v. Philips Elecs. N. Am. Corp., No. 13-cv-141 (W.D. Tex. Feb. 17, 2013), Dkt. 1 ("Dell Compl.") (same); Compl. ¶ 5, Best Buy Co. v. Hitachi, Ltd., No. 11-cv-5513 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 14, 2011), Dkt. 1 ("Best Buy Compl.") (same). Most of Sharp's allegations mirror the allegations in other MDL plaintiffs' complaints. This is not surprising given Sharp's representation in seeking to have its case transferred to the MDL that its claim of price-fixing was the same as other MDL plaintiffs. See Sharp's Administrative Motion Pursuant to Civil L.R. 3-12 to Consider Whether Cases Should Be Related, Dkt. 1604 (March 20, 2013), at 1 ("Both actions involve allegations that defendants conspired to fix the prices of Cathode Ray Tubes ('CRTs') and seek the same form of relief under Section 1 of the Sherman Act, Sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, and the laws of California and other states."). If Sharp knew it was bringing additional claims that were not at issue in the MDL, it should have stated so in its motion to relate its case to this MDL.

Case No. 07-5944 SC

Sharp also fails in its attempt to retroactively read a relevant geographic and product market into its complaints. It is apparent from the face of Sharp's three complaints that Sharp never intended to plead a relevant product or geographic market. None of Sharp's complaints feature section headings or even paragraphs devoted to the issues of relevant product market or geographic market. Sharp quotes its complaints out of context in a desperate attempt to prove it properly alleged a relevant product and geographic market, as required to sufficiently plead a rule-of-reason claim. Sharp asserts that its recognition that CPTs and CDTs are functionally different establishes it was claiming CPTs were a separate product market. Opp. at 2 (citing Sharp Compl. ¶¶ 3, 27, 29, 110, 197). However, numerous other MDL plaintiffs make that exact same allegation, verbatim, about the functional distinctions while also

1 claiming the alleged price-fixing conspiracy covers both CPTs and CDTs. See, e.g., Dell
2 Compl. ¶ 79; Best Buy Compl. ¶ 88; Target Compl. ¶ 95. Several plaintiffs went even further 3 than Sharp in distinguishing between CPTs and CDTs in their complaints by defining those 4 terms separately whereas Sharp combined references to CPTs and CDTs by defining them
5 collectively as “CRTs.” Compare Sharp Compl. ¶ 3 (“For purposes of this Complaint, CPTs 6 and CDTs of all sizes will be referred to collectively as ‘CRTs’.”) with Dell Compl. ¶ 3 (“For 7 the purposes of this Complaint, CPTs of all sizes and the products containing them shall be 8 referred to collectively as ‘CPT Products.’ Also for the purposes of this Complaint, CDTs of 9 all sizes and the products containing them shall be referred to as ‘CDT Products.’”). Sharp’s 10 complaints consistently refer to CPTs and CDTs as being collectively part of the CRT market, 11 rather than claiming separate markets. See, e.g., Sharp Compl. ¶¶ 5, 104, 111, 197-99.

12 As to the relevant geographic market, Sharp cites to a paragraph in its complaint that 13 referenced the “North American CRT market” to suggest that North America was the defined 14 relevant geographic market. Opp. at 2 (citing Sharp Compl. ¶ 169). However, that paragraph 15 has nothing to do with the relevant geographic market for Sharp’s claim, but merely alleges 16 that bilateral meetings were used to coordinate the pricing agreements with Brazilian and 17 Mexican manufacturers who served the North American market for CRTs. Sharp 18 Compl. ¶ 169. In that very same paragraph Sharp refers to a “global conspiracy.” Id. No 19 allegation in any of Sharp’s complaints alleges that North America is a separate geographic 20 market. In fact, the phrase “geographic market” does not appear once in any of Sharp’s three 21 complaints. As to anticompetitive harm, Sharp only alleges that it was injured as a result of 22 the alleged price-fixing conspiracy. Id. ¶ 215 (“As direct purchasers of CRTs, Plaintiffs have 23 suffered a direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable injury as a result of Defendants’ and 24 their co-conspirators’ conspiracy to raise, fix, stabilize or maintain CRT prices at supra-25 competitive levels.”).

26 Contrary to Sharp’s argument (Opp. at 4-5, 7), Defendants’ affirmative defenses do 27 not indicate that they were on notice of Sharp’s rule-of-reason claim. Sharp incorrectly 28 asserts that procompetitive justifications for Defendants’ alleged conduct are only relevant in

EXCLUDE CERTAIN EXPERT TESTIMONY OF JERRY A. HAUSMAN

Case No. 07-5944 SC

MDL No. 1917

1 a rule-of-reason case. Opp. at 5. When a plaintiff only has circumstantial evidence of a per se 2 price-fixing claim defendants are entitled to introduce evidence that their conduct is consistent 3 with other plausible explanations, and procompetitive reasons for information exchanges
 4 would be a relevant defense. See In re Citric Acid Litig., 191 F.3d 1090, 1094 (9th Cir. 1999)
 5 (finding that in a per se case, when a plaintiff rests its case “entirely on circumstantial 6 evidence,” the defendant can “rebut an allegation of conspiracy by showing a plausible and 7 justifiable reason for its conduct that is consistent with proper business practice”). Therefore, 8 Defendants were completely justified in asserting affirmative defenses based upon 9 procompetitive reasons for their conduct as to Sharp’s per se price-fixing claim. See, e.g., 10 Toshiba Corp.’s Answer to Sharp’s Second Am. Compl., Dkt. 2662 (June 30, 2014), at 57 11 (asserting affirmative defense because Toshiba Corp.’s conduct was “in furtherance of 12 legitimate business interests” and “did not unreasonably restrain competition”).

13 Tellingly, Defendants also asserted these same affirmative defenses in other MDL 14 cases which do not purport to assert a claim for a rule-of-reason violation based upon an 15 agreement to exchange information. See, e.g., Toshiba Corp.’s Answer to Dell’s First Am.
 16 Compl., Dkt. 2473 (Mar. 27, 2014), at 42 (asserting affirmative defense because Toshiba 17 Corp.’s conduct was “in furtherance of legitimate business interests” and “did not 18 unreasonably restrain competition”). Sharp singles out PENAC and KPNV for asserting an 19 affirmative defense titled “Rule of Reason” (Opp. at 4-5), but PENAC and KPNV asserted 20 this same “Rule of Reason” affirmative defense in MDL cases that do not purport to bring a 21 distinct claim based on anticompetitive information exchanges. See, e.g., KPNV’s Answer to 22 Dell’s First Am. Compl., Dkt. 1996 (Oct. 7, 2013), at 42 (eighth affirmative defense titled 23 “Rule of Reason”); PENAC Answer to Best Buy’s First Am. Compl., Dkt. 2184 (Nov. 4, 24 2013), at 47 (same). Sharp, for its part, fully understands the applicability of procompetitive 25 justifications for information exchanges in a per se case. In the LCD case (where Sharp 26 pleaded guilty to a per se violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and paid a criminal fine of 27 $120 million), Sharp asserted an affirmative defense in the civil actions that Sharp had 28 procompetitive reasons supporting its conduct, even though there was no rule-of-reason claim

Case No. 07-5944 SC

MDL No. 1917

1 brought by the LCD plaintiffs. See, e.g., Sharp Electronics Corp.’s Answer to Dell’s Second 2 Am. Compl. at 45, In re TFT-LCD (Flat Panel) Antitrust Litig., No. 07-md-01827 (N.D. Cal.
 3 Sept. 1, 2011), Dkt. 3425 (Ninth affirmative defense claims “[p]laintiffs’ claims are barred, in 4 whole or in part, because the conduct alleged was based on independent and legitimate 5 business justifications”). Therefore, Sharp has no basis to argue that these affirmative 6 defenses indicate that Defendants were on notice of its purported rule-of-reason claim.

7 B. Sharp’s Attempt To Add A New Claim Through Discovery
 8 And Expert Opinion Is Procedurally Improper And 9 Insufficient To Provide Requisite Notice

10 Sharp’s equivocal reference to an information-exchange violation in its supplemental 11 discovery responses to Hitachi and Samsung SDI (not the undersigned Defendants) is also 12 insufficient to provide notice of the new claim. Def. MIL No. 9 at 13-14. Sharp claims that 13 it “did not hide its light under a bushel” (Opp. at 10), but that is exactly what Sharp did by 14 burying its purported identification of a brand new claim in a supplemental discovery 15 response to a request propounded by only two Defendants. There have been hundreds of 16 discovery responses and supplements throughout the long history of this MDL. Discovery 17 responses in a case this complex are not meant to spring new claims on Defendants, but rather 18 to narrow the issues and factual bases for the allegations in the plaintiff’s complaint. Notably, 19 Sharp’s opposition is silent as to its reason for failing to incorporate this purported new claim 20 into its Second Amended Complaint, which was filed several months after these supplemental 21 discovery responses. Sharp is improperly attempting to circumvent its obligation to seek 22 leave of this Court to amend its complaint to add the new claim by sneaking notice of the new 23 claim through discovery responses.

24 The discovery request to which Sharp responded supposedly announcing its rule-of-25 reason claim demonstrates Sharp’s inconsistent position on notice of the claim. In June 2013, 26 Samsung SDI and Hitachi propounded an interrogatory requesting that Sharp: “State with 27 specificity the factual basis . . . for Your allegation that each of the Defendants conspired, 28 combined and contracted to fix, raise, maintain, and stabilize the price at which CRTs were sold, as alleged in, inter alia, Paragraph 5 of the Complaint.” Benson Decl. Ex. 1 at 14. In

Case No. 07-5944 SC

MDL No. 1917

1 its initial response to this interrogatory, Sharp made no reference to a purported rule-of-reason 2 information-exchange conspiracy claim. Id. at 14-15. Contrary to Sharp’s argument that the 3 rule-of-reason claim was properly asserted in the initial complaint, Sharp did not supplement 4 this discovery response to clarify the factual basis for its allegations by adding the purported 5 rule-of-reason claim until February 26, 2014, almost a year after it filed the initial complaint.
6 Sharp provides no explanation for this inconsistent position.

7 The list of discovery responses that supposedly reference Sharp’s rule-of-reason claim 8 exemplifies the ineffectiveness of Sharp’s alleged disclosure. Opp. at 10-11. None of these 9 discovery responses specifically references a rule-of-reason claim based upon an agreement to 10 exchange information. The vast majority of these discovery responses do not even directly 11 reference Sharp’s February 26, 2014 supplemental responses — which, as discussed below, 12 do not constitute sufficient notice of the new claim. There are multiple layers of incorporation 13 by reference to review before one even gets to a general reference to Sharp’s February 26, 14 2014 supplemental responses. See Benson Decl. Exs. 12, 14-24 (interrogatory responses that 15 reference another set of interrogatory responses that reference the February 26, 2014 16 supplemental responses without specific mention of rule-of-reason claim). It is not 17 Defendants’ burden to untangle the web of incorporation by references and cross-references to 18 other discovery responses to learn that Sharp is attempting to bring an entirely new claim for 19 relief. That type of convoluted disclosure cannot suffice to provide “the defendant [with] fair 20 notice of what the . . . claim is and the grounds upon which it rests.” Bell Atlantic Corp. v.
21 Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007) (citations omitted).

22 Sharp simply cannot cure the deficiencies in its complaint through some oblique 23 reference to a potential new claim in its discovery responses. See Def. MIL No. 9 at 13-14; 24 see also Adobe Lumber Inc. v. Hellman, No. 05-1510, 2010 WL 760826, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Mar.
25 4, 2010) (“A plaintiff may not make vague and generic allegations in her complaint and 26 simply add facts as discovery goes along without amending the complaint because to do so 27 ‘would read the “fair notice” requirement out of Rule 8(a) and would seriously undermine the 28 rule’s goal of encouraging expeditious resolution of disputes.’” (citation omitted)).

Case No. 07-5944 SC

MDL No. 1917

1 Defendants' cited cases in the opening motion support this proposition. Def. MIL No. 9 at 10-2 14. In trying to distinguish Pena, Sharp completely ignores the Pena court's statement that in 3 light of the Supreme Court's decisions in Twombly and Iqbal, which involved standards for 4 pleading claims, disclosure of new allegations through discovery alone fails to satisfy the 5 notice requirement of Rule 8 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure where the new 6 allegations are not included in an amended complaint. See Opp. at 14-15; see also Pena v.
 7 Taylor Farms Pac., Inc., No. 13-cv-01282, 2014 WL 1330754, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Mar. 28, 8 2014) ("Further, in most instances, notice may not be effected through discovery alone 9 because such notice will usually fail to satisfy Rule 8. . . . Instead, particularly in light of the 10 Supreme Court's subsequent decisions in [Twombly and Iqbal] a plaintiff must amend the 11 complaint or otherwise incorporate new allegations.") (citing Pickern v. Pier 1 Imports (U.S.), 12 Inc., 457 F.3d 963, 968-69 (9th Cir. 2006)). Sharp admits that it never amended its complaint 13 to add the new claim (Opp. at 13-14); therefore, disclosure through discovery alone does not 14 satisfy the fair notice requirement of Rule 8.

15 Sharp's effort to distinguish Bassani (Opp. at 15) also fails. Sharp's interrogatory 16 responses were both vague and conclusory as to the purported rule-of-reason claim. Sharp's 17 equivocal use of the conjunction "and/or" to purportedly allege alternative per se price-fixing 18 and rule-of-reason agreement to exchange information violations is far too ambiguous and 19 non-committal to properly state a claim. See J & J Sports Prods., Inc. v. Torres, 20 No. 09-cv-391, 2009 WL 1774268, at *3 (M.D. Fl. June 22, 2009) (holding that the use of 21 "and/or" rendered complaint impermissibly ambiguous, noting that while "[p]laintiffs in 22 federal court are permitted to plead in the alternative . . . they are not permitted to plead 'in the 23 ambiguous'") (citing United States v. Bush, 70 F.3d 557, 562 (10th Cir. 1995) (explaining that 24 the use of the conjunction "and/or" adds a great deal of uncertainty and that "such vague 25 language is strongly disfavored")); see also Gumbs v. Litton Loan Servicing, 26 No. 09-cv-01159, 2009 WL 3246605 (E.D. Cal. Oct. 7, 2009) (granting defendants' motion to 27 dismiss plaintiff's complaint, which "made vague and ambiguous allegations" employing the 28 phrase "and/or"). Additionally, Sharp's interrogatory responses merely outline the criteria to

1 state a rule-of-reason claim without providing any of the factual bases for that claim.
 2 Accordingly, the discovery responses did not constitute sufficient notice of the new claim.
 3 See Bassani v. Sutton, No. 08-3012, 2010 WL 1734857, at *4-5 (E.D. Wash. Apr. 28, 2010) 4 (finding “vague and conclusory” statements in interrogatory responses “setting forth only ill-5 defined allegations” were insufficient to put defendant on notice of new claims to warrant 6 defendants taking discovery on the new claims).

7 The cases relied upon by Sharp for the proposition that notice of a new claim may be 8 provided in an interrogatory response (Opp. at 8-9) are all distinguishable. In Planmatics, Inc.
 9 v. Showers, the court found that “the allegations and claims set forth in the complaint were 10 sufficient to put Showers on notice of the alternative theories for breach of fiduciary duties 11 that could be raised against him.” 137 F. Supp. 2d 616, 625 (D. Md. 2001). In terms of the 12 discovery response, the court merely found that it “served its function of flushing out the 13 factual underpinnings of Plaintiff’s claim.” Id. Here, as discussed above, Sharp’s complaint 14 does not provide notice of the distinct claim; therefore, discovery is insufficient to flush out a 15 claim that was never pleaded. Sharp’s reliance on Nat’l Sur. Corp. v. Charles Carter & Co., 16 539 F.2d 450 (5th Cir. 1976), is also misplaced. In that case, the issue of negligence by the 17 subcontractor had expressly been made an issue in third-party complaints. Id. at 458.
 18 Furthermore, a trial was held during which the issue of negligence was addressed by all 19 parties. Id. Therefore, the court found that the parties had tried the issue of negligence by 20 consent even if it had not been properly pleaded in all of the complaints. Id. Here, 21 Defendants do not consent to presenting evidence of the unpleaded claim at trial. Finally, 22 both of these cases predate Twombly and Iqbal, which courts in this circuit have recognized 23 impact the manner in which new claims and allegations may be raised during the course of a 24 case. See, e.g., Pena, 2014 WL 1330754, at *5.

25 Defendants were also not put on notice of Sharp’s intention to add a rule-of-reason 26 information-exchange claim through Dr. Hausman’s report. See Def. MIL No. 9 at 13. The 27 fact that Defendants asked Dr. Hausman questions about information exchanges at his 28 deposition does not show notice of the new claim. Sharp concedes that Dr. Hausman’s report

Case No. 07-5944 SC

MDL No. 1917

1 is limited to a discussion of alleged information exchanges. Opp. at 5-6. As discussed above, 2 evidence of procompetitive justification for information exchanges is relevant to a per se
 3 claim of price-fixing based on circumstantial evidence. Therefore, Defendants' questioning 4 about the procompetitive justifications of information exchanges does not prove notice of the 5 rule-of-reason claim, as Sharp suggests. Defendants questioned Dr. Hausman about the 6 contents of his report, but it was not Defendants' burden to guess whether Sharp intended to 7 change its claims based upon its expert's opinion in the absence of an amendment to the 8 pleadings. See, e.g., Richardson v. Rose Transport, Inc., No. 11-0317, 2014 WL 121690, at 9 *5 (E.D. Ky. Jan. 13, 2014) ("[T]he fact that an expert witness opined about a defendants' 10 negligence does not, on its own, put the defendants on notice that the plaintiffs are pursuing 11 claims that have not been alleged in either the original complaint or the first amended 12 complaint. . . . The burden is not on the defendant to discern which claims the plaintiff intends 13 to bring against it when the complaint makes clear exactly which claims are being brought." 14 (emphasis in original) (citation omitted)).

15 In a footnote, Sharp asserts that courts have found oppositions to motions for summary 16 judgment and other non-pleadings sufficient to put defendants on notice of plaintiff's theories.
 17 Opp. at 9 n.14. However, courts in the Ninth Circuit have consistently held that it is improper 18 to raise a new claim, which had not been properly pleaded, at the summary judgment stage.
 19 See, e.g., Pickern, 457 F.3d at 968-69; Pena, 2014 WL 1330754, at *5. Therefore, Sharp's 20 reliance on notice of the rule-of-reason claim in exchanges of proposed verdict forms, jury 21 instructions, and the pretrial order, all of which were filed or exchanged after the close of 22 discovery, cannot save its unpleaded claims.

23 C. Defendants Would Suffer Prejudice If A New Claim Were 24 Added At This Late Stage

25 Sharp argues that the fact that no depositions of Sharp witnesses had taken place prior 26 to its February 26, 2014 responses means Defendants had a full opportunity to seek discovery 27 on its rule-of-reason claim. Opp. at 4. Even if the supplemental interrogatory responses 28 constituted notice of the claim — which they do not — Sharp fundamentally misunderstands the issue. The key to developing discovery on Sharp's purported rule-of-reason claim would be focused on Defendants' conduct (not Sharp's conduct) and whether there were any agreements to exchange information. As of February 26, 2014, sixty-two depositions of Defendants' current or former employees had already taken place in the MDL. Declaration of Lucius B. Lau ¶ 3. Defendants would have been prejudiced even if proper notice had been given of the new claim on February 26, 2014 — nearly seven years after the first complaints were filed in this MDL and after substantial discovery had taken place in the MDL. To allow Sharp to move forward on this unpleaded claim at this even later stage would cause severe prejudice and undue delay because fairness would require reopening discovery and summary judgment briefing to address the new claim. Def. MIL No. 9 at 11-12.

D. Sharp Has Not Met Its Burden To Show That Dr. Hausman's Testimony Is Relevant To Sharp's Per Se Price-Fixing Claim

Sharp's conclusory statement that Dr. Hausman's opinions are relevant to a Section 1 allegation under either a rule-of-reason claim or a per se claim does not meet its burden to show Dr. Hausman's testimony is relevant. See Opp. at 15; see also Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 592 n. 10 (1993) (finding the proponent of expert testimony has the burden of proving admissibility pursuant to Rule 702 by a preponderance of the evidence). Sharp concedes that Dr. Hausman does not "opin[e] on the issue of whether there was a per se illegal agreement." Opp. at 5. Yet, Sharp points to nothing in Dr. Hausman's reports or testimony to support the conclusion that his opinion on the amount of overcharges would be the same if he analyzed the case under the assumption that there was a global price-fixing conspiracy on all CRTs as alleged in Sharp's complaints.

Sharp fails to explain how Dr. Hausman's testimony on the relevant geographic and product markets is relevant to its per se price-fixing claims. Def. Ex. A (Expert Report of Jerry A. Hausman (Apr. 15, 2014)) ¶¶ 11-16. In a per se price-fixing case, this type of relevant market analysis is unnecessary and irrelevant. See Knevelbaard Dairies v. Kraft Foods, Inc., 232 F.3d 979, 986 (9th Cir. 2000) ("When a per se violation such as horizontal price fixing has occurred, there is no need to define a relevant market or to show that the

1 defendants had power within the market.”). Sharp concedes that the relevant geographical 2 and product markets are only applicable to its rule-of-reason claim. See Opp. at 3-4 (“Sharp 3 also set forth its factual contentions regarding the relevant product market for the rule-of- 4 reason violation Sharp additionally set forth the factual basis regarding the geographic 5 market for the rule-of-reason violation”) (emphases added).

6 Sharp’s citation to the deposition testimony of defense expert Dr. Dennis Carlton 7 (Opp. at 16) does not support Sharp’s conclusion that Dr. Hausman’s opinion is relevant to its 8 per se claim. The excerpt Sharp cites has nothing to do with Dr. Hausman’s report or opinion.
 9 See Opp. at 16 (citing Benson Decl. Ex. 7 (Carlton Dep. 331:22-332:2)). Dr. Carlton was 10 specifically asked about Dell’s allegations of price-fixing conduct. Id. In providing an 11 answer to a hypothetical question about whether it would be important to know whether a 12 plaintiff is alleging a per se as opposed to a rule-of-reason case, Dr. Carlton responded but 13 qualified his response by stating: “maybe I am not fully understanding your question.”
 14 Benson Decl. Ex. 7 (Carlton Dep. 332:10-11). Dr. Carlton’s response to an incomplete 15 hypothetical question unrelated to Dr. Hausman’s opinion that Dr. Carlton admitted he did not 16 fully understand adds nothing to Sharp’s argument. In the factual situation here, where the 17 scope of the alleged conspiracy differs depending on the theory of liability, it certainly matters 18 whether the expert addressed both scenarios in his report.

19 * * *

1 III. CONCLUSION

2 For these reasons and the reasons set forth in Defendants' motion in limine number 9, 3 the Court should grant Defendants' motion and preclude Dr. Hausman from providing expert 4 testimony concerning the effect of Defendants' information exchanges on the North American 5 CPT market and Sharp's alleged damages that resulted from the information exchanges.
